Sycamore Land Trust will honor those who made the Beanblossom Bottoms Environmental Education Trail a reality during a weekend ceremony.

Board president John Gallman, hundreds of volunteers who worked on trail construction and the financial backers who made it possible will be recognized during a 10:30 a.m. event on Saturday at the trail head.

Beanblossom Bottoms is located north of Bloomington in northwestern Monroe County.

The education trail allows hikers deep into the 500-acre property on a two-mile boardwalk loop, allowing them to experience a high-quality hardwood wetland. Beanblossom Bottoms is also home to an active bald eagles' nest, and great blue herons have nested there.
