

Local business briefs: www.heraldtimesonline.com

H-T report
6/15/2012

Staff changes at Sycamore Land Trust

BLOOMINGTON — There have been some recent staff changes at Sycamore Land Trust. Katrina Folsom has been named the communications and development assistant, and Patrick Petro has been promoted to development director.

Folsom will support communications and fundraising activities, as well as oversee office management. For the past two years, Folsom served Sycamore Land Trust as a service corps fellow through the Indiana University School of Public and Environmental Affairs.

Petro will take on more of the core responsibilities of ensuring the trust's growth and looking forward to more personal interactions with the organization's donors and members. Prior to his promotion, Petro served as communications director and office manager.

Founded in 1990, Sycamore Land Trust helps preserve the disappearing natural and agricultural landscape of southern Indiana.

Hoosier Energy's Tryba wins award

BLOOMINGTON — Chris Tryba, communications manager at Hoosier Energy, is the recipient of the Chesnutt Award for Best Total Communication Program.

The award was given by the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association and presented recently to Tryba by Glenn English, chief executive of the association.

Bloomington-based Hoosier Energy recently received the top 2012 Communication Award from the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association Spotlight on Excellence competition.

Send business news to business@heraldt.com. To make sure we receive the information, please include your news in the body of the email rather than as an attachment.

Katrina Folsom

Patrick Petro

Chris Tryba

